Mr. Putnam reported that the government would have to raise its charges to farmers for clear-ing land under its program.

"Increased costs of operation, through higher wages, cost of fuel, parts, new machinery, etc., will necessitate a substantial increase in hourly rates charged to farmers," he said, indicating that the six outfits using 18 crawler tractors would clear an estimated 10,000 acres during the oming season.

The minister said that consideration was being given to se-curing equipment to break and prepare the land cleared by the rogram for crops and to a eans of enabling farmers in Mr. Pearson indicated that appropriate areas to construct stock-watering dams, dugouts and sources of supply for domes

"In my opinion," he said, "the agriculture of the Peace River and on Central B.C. can not be expected to develop and prosper without some such program of

SWITCH IN CITY FINANCING

IN PREVIOUS YEARS THE CITY COUNcil has observed the policy of determi its needs and has then passed its budget mayor and aldermen have usually had before them a tentative mill rate beyond which they did not wish to go, but which was sufficiently flexible to permit play either way. With acceptance of the finance committee's commendation yesterday the council has fixed the 1948 rate at 45% mills—the same as last year-and will now proceed to trim its estimates to come within the levy that rate is expected to yield.

A basic reason for that policy seems to be the belief that real property is burdened with as much taxation as it can bear. Under existing conditions the money that is raised will not go as far as it did in 1947 or in previous years. Costs are up. That means, in other words, that if Victoria is to undertake major development in 1948, funds will most probably have to be raised by money by-laws. The trend toward that system has been setting in during recent years. There is no impropriety in the policy. It was necessary to facilitate arrangements for such undertakings as expansion and rehabilitation of the water works and other projects, the costs of which were beyond the abilities of taxpayers to meet in any one year's payments.

Support is accorded the method on the grounds that large works of enduring value should not be paid for entirely by the property owners of one generation. Posterity should help to foot the bill for benefits it will gain. Moreover, money can be borrowed at present at a relatively low interest rate.

It should not be forgotten, however, that such by-laws add to the debt charges which Victoria has to carry. In addition to paying the price for the job that must be done, the citizens also have to pay for the use of borrowed money. They are now paying for the use of money spent years ago for construction of some assets which have already worn out but for which the debt has not yet been discharged.

This does not suggest that the city should curtail all activity beyond that for which it can raise money from the immediate current levy. Obviously development would be hopelessly stunted if such restrictions were imposed. It must nevertheless be understood that Victoria at present is paying in debt charges an amount that represents approximately 20 per cent of total annual expenditures. That means that one-fifth of the money collected by the city is removed from the sum which the council can apply to current undertakings and the maintenance of existing services. It may be necessary to increase the debt through money by-laws if real estate cannot, or should not, carry a heavier load. But obviously it is the more expensive way of doing business.

STILL SERVING

EVIDENCE THAT MEMBERS OF THE Rangers organization formed as a defensive group in wartime will continue their activities in the south Vancouver Island area by manning rescue teams and search parties will be welcomed by residents of this district. In their peacetime guise, the Rangers will be able to respond to an emergency by placing experienced, wellequipped men in the woods to search for lost hunters, render first aid to the injured, or perform similar life-saving duties which could be successfully carried out only by men who were thoroughly familiar with the terrain and knew how to handle themselves on the trail. The recent addition of a trained bloodhound and carrier pigeons to the Rangers' facilities will make their organization doubly valuable when a call for assistance is received. There should be congratulations from the general public to these men who, from the nucleus of their wartime association, have through their own efforts formed a unit of great value to the common welfare.

Last week, other nations would inevitably solve the problems for which answers have been found by those now engaged in the production of atomic bombs. Monopoly, other words, would be of relatively short duration. The threat to humanity implied in a more widely-disseminated knowledge of this destructive force, however, was tempered by the belief that it would eventually be diverted to constructive purpose as a usable source of power.

The latter potentiality has been of some encouragement to all who believed that atomic power, like the primitive weapons of Tubal Cain, could be fashioned into something of creative value to mankind. Now, however, a group of United States scientists has come forward with the sugestion that the United Nations consider

The machine presumably will reduce cans, fruit rinds and other materials to a solid, non-floating state so that they will not return to shore after having been dumped at sea.

The arrangement as outlined by Ald. Hunter will cost about $3,500; but the city will pay nothing if the crusher does not apparatus in operation by the coming summer, and the expenditure would be one of

SCENTS OF SMELL

I SEE THAT A FRENCHMAN has been airing his views in Toronto on the subject of our Canadian sense of smell. Evidently we women brashly use the wrong scents, in his

The gentleman in question, whose position as a representative of a world-renowned Paris perfume house no doubt makes him an expert on such a delicate subject, thinks we are not sufficiently educated in the use of the distilled essences

And that any woman who wants to sail into society smelling her best must give as much time to the development of her nasal nuances as she does to the attainment of the newest

COLDER VARIETY

T DON'T KNOW WHETHER it reflects the erstwhile European concept of Canada as "Our Lady of the Snews," but he says that we women should use a "colder perfume," whatever.

Not that we are cold, he gallantly hastens to add, but because the northern type, to which we apparently belong, should smell more of honeysuckle than orchids. That's all right with me. I never was strong on orchids, anyway.

But I don't see -or smell-very much honeysuckle around, either. And I am wondering just where I fit into his particular perfume pattern as my particular type doesn't seem to have been provided for

FLEUR DE SKUNK?

FOR INSTANCE, no one would class me as a sophisticated type with a southern complexion which needs, according to the Paris expert, something heavy with musk, jasmine or tropical flowers, like frangipani.

Nor can I be typed as a delicate white-haired beauty, that calls for lilacs and rose-petals. Decidedly not!

So it may be that I come in the in-betweens, the non-descripts whom he advised to use light perfume in a summer dress, who—horrors!—"should spray her fur coat with animal-like odor." Can he possibly mean Fleur de Skunk? And is he suggesting that this might be peculiarly appropriate for Canadians?

PERSONALITY AND PLACE

AND YOU WOMEN who just reach out for the old scentthe ears had better reform.

Take it from him that there is much more to it than that.

You have to take into account not only your personality and physique, but the time of day as well. So I have been doing a little research into the whole perfume problem.

Since reading that Paris parfumier's views a few days ago I have gone about my daily meanderings with my nose a-quiver like a pointer on the scent, sniffing so hard as to lead some observers to mistake my nasal research for super-
